ABOUT

Martina has over 15 years of experience leading projects for a variety of organisations, including global life sciences companies, non-profit research organisations, charities and trade associations. Her projects aim at expanding the evidence used in healthcare decisions and shaping the debate around critical health policy issues. Her areas of expertise include value based assessments in high- and middle- income countries; economic issues posed by the development and provision of orphan medicines; methods and applications of structured decision-making approaches such as Multi-Criteria Decision Analysis (MCDA).
